

Dear TWF friends

Curating Gender Parity in the Art World

"How can you really tell the story of a culture when you don't include all the voices within the culture?" The Guerrilla Girls, New York based anonymous feminist art activist group

This week has been highly anticipated by art lovers and enthusiasts. Hong Kong Art Week is returning, with Art Central opening on Wednesday, followed by Art Basel and auctions at Sotheby's and Christie's.

Excitement aside, a quick glance through the programmes show that exhibitions and auctions are still largely a male domain. In a blog last year, we pointed out that the representation of female artists in Hong Kong commercial galleries comprised a paltry 6% to 7%.

However, the problem encompasses more than female artists not having opportunities to have their work exhibited - it's also about women attaining high-ranking jobs at galleries and museums.

TWF PROGRAMME UPDATES

Girls Go Tech Alumni Programme Update

Last Friday, our GGT alumni participated in a workshop at Bloomberg's studio. The girls were introduced to the basics of Python and learnt to create a video game. We were pleased to see they made good progress on programming. Thank you Bloomberg for developing the curriculum and hosting the workshop!

Financial Literacy and Employability Training Programme Update

The final quarterly review gathering was held at the Hong Kong Employment Development Service with 13 participants who completed our Financial Literacy and Employability Training Programme. We were happy to learn the majority of participants continued to practice good financial habits on spending and saving.

Mentoring Programme - Check-ins

Last week, our mentors and protégés came together for their monthly peer to peer check-ins to share best practice on their mentoring experience and to receive feedback and advice from their peers on other areas of their professional development. Thanks to our Advisory Council members for facilitating and to Barclays for hosting.

Mentoring Programme - Making Work, Work for You

Last Thursday, our mentors and protégés took part in a Making Work, Work for You session facilitated by Jennifer Woollford | NEON MARKETING to talk about how to build their career into the context of their wider life. Huge thanks to Scotiabank for hosting.

30% Club Boardroom Series

Last Thursday, we held the second workshop of the Boardroom Series with Meraki Executive Search & Consulting and HKU on how to secure a board position. Thank you to our host KPMG and the sponsors of the Boardroom Series for making this possible - Standard Chartered Bank, Goldman Sachs and KPMG.
